

CREATING CONTRADICTIONS

If you want to create contradictions, you need to develop your character's flaws. Use the questions below to better know these features.

What is something that makes your character emotional?

What annoys people about your character?

What is something your character tries to hide about themselves?

CREATING CONTRADICTIONS

Next, you'll want to develop your character's beliefs and views.

What does your character think about the society the live in?

What does your character think of other people?

What is one thing your character believes and cannot tolerate if something goes against that belief?

CREATING CONTRADICTIONS

Finally, you'll want to flesh out your character's behavior.

What does your character do every day?

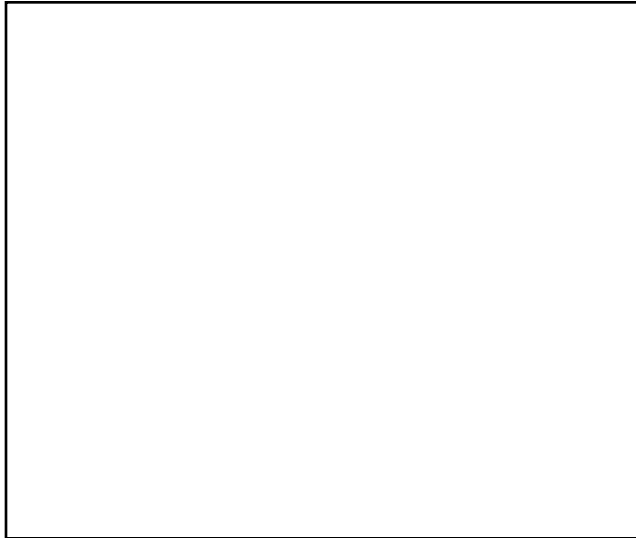

How does your character react to strangers? Lifelong friends?

Does your character treat people differently based on their beliefs, behaviors, or flaws? Or something else?

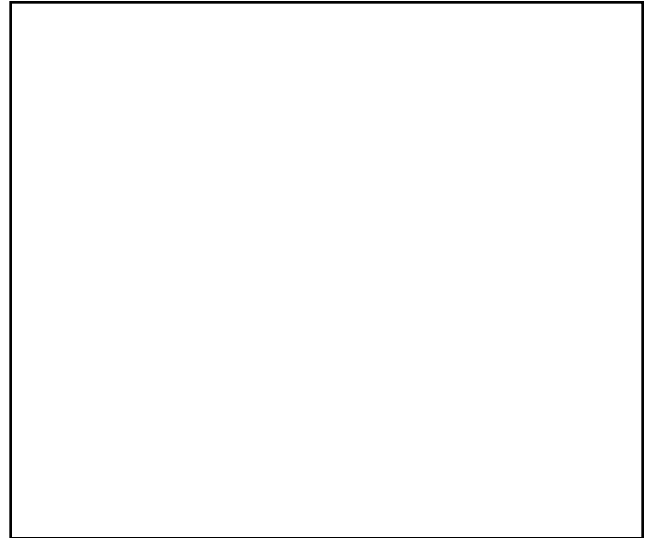

CREATING CONTRADICTIONS

Use the space below to brainstorm how your character's flaws, view and beliefs, and actions and behaviors shape your contradictions.
